

Phase One of the Ninth Stage — The Unity of Human Existence and the Birth of the Cosmic Human

1. Introduction

At this stage, the philosophical gaze turns inward toward the essence of the human being, no longer as a mere biological or social entity, but as the living axis of meaning within the universe. The unity of human existence does not refer to a mystical fusion with the divine, nor to a materialist reduction of consciousness; rather, it is the recognition that the human being is the mirror where the world becomes self-aware.

We are not speaking from within the currents of Sufism or atheism, but from within the deep logic of Being itself, which seeks in humanity its awakening, its compassion, and its freedom. The "cosmic human" is not a new species — it is the human who chooses to be human, who reclaims the lost dignity of consciousness by living as meaning, not merely as survival.

2. The Principle of the Chosen Humanity

Humanity, in its authentic form, is not a given fact but a moral and existential choice. Each person stands before a silent invitation: to continue as part of the predatory circle of nature, or to transcend toward the realm of value.

To be human, then, is to choose meaning over necessity, compassion over domination, creation over repetition.

As the ancient seekers of wisdom have said — you are your choice.

This is the moment of birth of the cosmic human: when man awakens not to power, but to participation in the inner logic of existence — the logic of integration and mutual need. For in this cosmic law, nothing is complete alone, and no being exists in isolation. Unity is not the denial of difference, but the harmony of distinct beings in a shared becoming.

3. Between Transcendence and Immanence

Our project thus stands in the space between: between heaven and earth, between matter and spirit, between the natural and the historical.

We reject both the external transcendence that separates the divine from the world, and the absolute immanence that dissolves value into matter.

Instead, we propose that the meaning of existence unfolds within the world, through the journey of humanity itself.

This is not a metaphysical speculation, but a historical mission — for history is the field where Being learns to recognize itself. The cosmic human is therefore the conscious agent of history, the bridge between necessity and freedom.

4. The Law of Awakening

In the first law of this stage, the Law of Awakening, the human realizes that every act of compassion, justice, or trust is not moral ornament, but ontological revelation.

Through such acts, Being discloses itself as meaning — and history ascends one more spiral in the eternal cycle of the Becoming of Being.

The unity of human existence is thus not an abstract idea, but a concrete rhythm where awareness becomes creation, and creation becomes freedom.
